January 2017

What we aim to achieve

1. Improved standard of living for rural poor families (emergency, income-generation and housing assistance)
2. Improved access to clean water, sanitation and hygiene for rural poor families
3. Increased school attendance by rural poor children
4. Greater access to and use of local social services by rural poor
5. Improved capacity of local network groups to productively address needs of the rural population (Women and Children Consultative Committees (WCCC) and Commune Councils for Women and Children (CCWC))

How we do this (key activities)

Help the most vulnerable rural poor

- Identify who needs help: Community mapping to identify marginalized families for basic interventions
- Make a plan: Assessments and working with identified families and community members to develop a plan for livelihood improvement that is suitable for that family
- Provide material help: Capital or animals given to marginalized families to start income generation activities; provide materials and help to build houses if required
- Monitor and evaluate: Conduct ongoing family monitoring and technical coaching to ensure family income is generated productively

Promote community development

- Distribute information among villagers and leaders on the benefits of establishing village self help groups (SHG)
- Assist communities and families to establish SHGs
- Provide startup material assistance to SHG (animals, small capital)
- Coach and monitor to ensure best practice in management of the SHG
- Participate in SHG meetings to identify those most needing help housing, water jugs, water filters, and latrines
- Provide supervision and technical assistance to villagers building latrines with training and follow-up on correct use
- Improve access to communal sources of water (wells, pumps, ponds)

Establish and strengthen community networks to care for the most vulnerable

Note: In 2011 the Cambodian government established 2 major networks to protect women and children: Women and Children Consultative Committees (WCCC) and Commune Councils for Women and Children (CCWC). These networks are collaboration among local government agencies and NGOs.

CFS participates as follows:

- Train and mentor local government to grow robust local networks that actually address the needs of their constituents
- Monitor and provide technical support
- Participate in network meetings and advocate for the most poor and marginalized
- Participate in community awareness-raising sessions

Improve education of rural children

- School-friendly training for teacher and students to encourage school attendance
- Organize/participate in sessions of awareness raising among school children on health, hygiene, domestic violence, safe migration, human rights, etc.
- Help identify and plan interventions for children with learning problems
- Monitor children at risk and do follow up home visits
- Ongoing home visits for at-risk children and refer family members for proper health care or other help
- Organize and run annual International Children's Day activities focusing on rights of children
- Help villages build literacy centers in villages where children have no access to education

What we achieved in 2016

In December 2016 the Ministry of Social Affairs, Royal Government of Cambodia, officially recognized CFS as a Child Safe Organization (CSO).
